TRIANON COURT COLLECTION

TRIANON COURT

It was during the reign of King Louis XVI that discoveries at Pompeii and Herculaneum revealed clues about the interiors of the ancient Romans and Greeks, inspiring a new form of French neoclassical furniture. Refined simplicity, subdued elegance and delicate ornamentation were the ideals of the furniture of this period and are the hallmark of Marge Carson's Trianon Court Collection today.

A close-up photograph of a classic upholstered chair. The chair features a dark, possibly black or dark brown, metal frame with ornate, scrolled details. The seat and backrest are covered in a patterned fabric, likely a paisley or floral design, in shades of brown and gold. A decorative tassel or fringe hangs from the backrest. The background is softly blurred, showing what appears to be a window with curtains and some foliage.
