Michelangelo concept

La collezione Michelangelo di Medea Lifestyle 1905 richiama forme e materiali del passato, ma reinterpretati nelle forme, nelle proporzioni, nei materiali e nella tecnologia divenendo pezzi che vanno oltre le mode e gli stilismi. Il design di questi pezzi è ispirato all'arredo delle dimore alto borghesi milanesi degli anni trenta come Villa Necchi Campiglio disegnata da Piero Portaluppi o alle opere di Gio Ponti e Guglielmo Ulrich sempre di quegli anni. Questi autori facevano parte del movimento culturale ed artistico chiamato "Novecento" nato a Milano alla fine del 1922. Il Novecento ha come supremo riferimento l'antichità classica, la purezza delle forme e l'armonia nella composizione, ma questo amore per la tradizione viene contaminato dalla grande rivoluzione modernista e razionalista mittel europea della Bauhaus, di Walter Gropius e Mies van der Rohe. In questo modo le opere di quegli anni creano un equilibrio tra antico e moderno, tra innovazione e tradizione, tra rivoluzione e conservazione. La stessa filosofia è quella che caratterizza questi mobili.

The furniture Michelangelo collection of Medea Lifestyle 1905 recalls shapes and materials from the past, but reinterpreted in the shapes, proportions, materials and technology; becoming pieces ranging beyond fashion and trends. The design of these pieces is inspired by the furnishings of the Milanese bourgeois mansions of the thirties like Villa Necchi Campiglio designed by Piero Portaluppi or works of Gio Ponti and Guglielmo Ulrich always of those years. These authors were part of the cultural and artistic movement called "Novecento" born in Milan at the end of 1922. The twentieth century has as supreme reference the classical antiquity, purity of shapes and harmony in the composition. But this love of tradition is contaminated by the great modern and rational revolution of the Bauhaus of Walter Gropius and Mies van der Rohe in Central Europe. In this way the works of those years create a balance between old and new, between tradition and innovation, between revolution and conservation. The same philosophy characterizes this collection.
