MAITLAND-SMITH

HISTORY & CRAFTSMANSHIP

For over three decades Maitland-Smith has been in the business of creating exquisite and unique decorative accessories, lighting and accent furniture.

Founded by a London antique dealer with the eye of a connoisseur, Maitland-Smith has carried on the tradition of creating stunning accents for the home of the highest quality and breathtaking execution.

From the beginning, our many workrooms have been artisan based and employ time-honored techniques developed before the machine age. Many of these skills date back to the world's earliest civilizations, and are associated with fine quality furniture and decorative arts.

Maitland-Smith is well-known for many hand-crafted specialties, including hand carved tropical mahogany, hand cut and inlaid exotic wood veneers, lost wax cast metal mounts and decorative objects, as well as, traditional vegetable tanned and hand-tooled leather. Other areas of expertise include finely executed porcelains, sophisticated finishing techniques, and detailed hand painting. We draw inspiration from great works from the 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries.

LOST WAX CASTING

From its inception, the technique of lost wax casting has remained the preferred process of jewelers, sculptors and artisans. The process was developed by the Greeks and Romans and has remained in use since its beginning. The many-step technique begins with a finely carved wax model. This wax model is then surrounded by a special form of concrete which is extremely fine in consistency. This allows the concrete to capture all the detail of the original wax version.

As the concrete dries, two different holes are carved into the material to facilitate casting. The mold is then allowed to harden and cure.

The concrete mold is then filled with molten metal, which in turn melts the original wax model which drains away using a narrow exit hole. When the mold cools, it is broken open to reveal a finely cast metal object which was once wax. It is at this point a hand applied finish is added. Among our most popular finishes are verdigris, aged brass, dark bronze and burnished bronze. All Maitland-Smith castings are molded in brass and other fine metals.

HAND PAINTING

Our artisans continue the skills of the 17th and 18th century's ateliers. Hand painting is undeniably among these traditional crafts.

Unlike machine aided copies or replicas, original work like hand painting is regarded as a unique expression of an artisan and of greater value.

The talented artisans in our ateliers possess the painting skills of their 18th-century counterparts. Attributes like attention to detail and eye-hand coordination are key.

Technical virtuosity is the personal signature of the artist. An expertly handled brush can make techniques like dry-brushing, color blending and feathering seem effortless and original.

METAL WORKING

Among the most versatile of materials used in the decorative arts is metal. Prized for its durability and variety of forms, metal can be worked in a number of fascinating ways, thereby increasing its decorative applications.

Embossing metal dates to its earliest use and is part of the technique of hammering. It is the ability to press metal out of shape without breaking or cracking. Embossing is hammering metal from the back side in order to raise a controlled decoration on the front.

Termed "repoussé" by the French, all embossing is hand worked by our trained craftsmen.

LEATHER

Maitland-Smith strives for authenticity in our use of materials. Fine leather, hand colored and tooled has long been a material of choice for desks and library tables, as well as card and game tables. Favored for its durability and ease of replacement when damaged, leather is an integral part of furniture making.

We process our leather using the same materials and techniques favored by master cabinetmakers of the 18th century. Processing leather involves a long, multi-step procedure but some of the most important features are captured in the final steps with hand tooling or embossing.

Originally created by the Bookbinders Guild to apply titles and decorations to their leather volumes, the skills were soon adopted by furniture makers. By using heated brass wheels with incised designs on the edge, artisans can roll the wheel (held by a handle) across the leather and permanently emboss a leather with a decoration.

The resulting depressions are called blind tooling. When a more noticeable design is required, gold or silver leaf is placed on the leather and the heated tool is used to emboss the leather and transfer the gold or silver leaf to the impressions.

EXOTIC SHELL INLAY

The use of exotic seashells has a long history in the decorative arts. Many have strong visual appeal, are durable and can be cut and polished.

The shell's durability lends itself to veneered surfaces and inlaid accents. The wide variety of types available provides a stimulus to creativity and innovation.

At Maitland-Smith we use a variety of shells in traditional and innovative ways. As a complete veneer covering an entire object, either solid or fashioned into patterns, it is labor-intensive with each piece cut, fitted and hand polished. Our artisans have over 30 years experience working with exotic shells and related skills.

HAND CARVED WOOD

Perhaps the most demanding skill in the rich tradition of craftsmanship is hand carving. Archeologists can date early surviving examples over three thousand years old. Fantastic wooden objects have been uncovered in Egyptian tombs alongside jewel encrusted gold and silver artifacts. Other examples date from the Middle Ages, primarily ecclesiastical figures.

The Renaissance was the setting for the reawakening of the decorative arts. Specialized guilds of artisans were formed to advance and protect particular skills. Carvers guilds arose throughout Europe alongside goldsmiths, jewelers and other similar trades.

The richly ornamental styles of the 17th and 18th centuries are a testament to the caliber of craftsmanship available. Our carvers use the same tools and techniques as their 18th-century counterparts. After years of training, their skills are applied to a wide variety of Maitland-Smith items. Examples include our hand carved mahogany dining chairs, occasional chairs, mirror frames and numerous decorative objects.

MARQUETRY & PARQUE-

As highly regarded traditional furniture crafts, these handcrafted inlay processes began in Germany and Holland.

In the hands of a trained artisan, shaped veneered wood or other suitable material is applied to a furniture frame, forming a mosaic-like pattern or image on the surface.

Marquetry may be floral, or an arabesque, but it must be curvilinear. If the pattern is geometric, it is called parquetry. Both are traditional decorative techniques which add intrinsic value to fine furniture. By the 17th century marquetry in particular reached new heights of skill and innovation, and was prized by patrons of the era. The use of the process was further advanced by the importation of rare and exotic woods from around the world, unique to Western Europe.

LAMP

The high quality of our hand sewn lamp shades reflects our company's mission – that of providing our customers with the very best materials and workmanship possible. Since we make our own shades, we control the quality from start to finish.

All hand sewn shades begin with a custom made welded wire frame. This frame or armature determines the shape and size of the shade. The frame is then hand wrapped with a fine muslin ribbon. It is to this fabric covered frame that our skilled hand sewers stitch the outer fabric and inner lining. Dressmaker details including hand-set pleating, smocking and embroidery are determined by the designer. Final steps include the addition of trim at the top and bottom, such as folds, gimping and other custom details.

♦ K9 Optical Crystal is extremely hard and clear. This permits specialized polishing to produce a surface that transmits light with little or no distortion, which sparkles with diamond-like brilliance when cut into facets. Its precise optic effects, developed for the scientific requirements of lens makers, also make it the finest engravable surface for artistic impression. Optical crystal pieces also have the distinction of being lead free, and are available in a variety of solid forms.

Products in the Maitland-Smith line are handcrafted by skilled artisans and finished from the highest quality materials such as wood, stone, veneer, glass, brass and iron. We regularly use natural materials; therefore, small variations in shapes, surfaces and finishes can occur. These variations are inherent to their species and enhance the rich craftsmanship and beauty of each product.

Every effort has been made to accurately reflect the true hues of our finishes; however, due to the photographic and printing processes used in the creation of this catalog, actual finish and fabric color may vary slightly from the images shown. Therefore we recommend that you contact your authorized dealer to see actual product.

Note: Wattages listed for lighting are maximum wattages per bulb for an individual lighting piece. If no bulb type is indicated, a normal, incandescent light bulb is used.

Size of product is not always apparent from the images shown; therefore, please note dimensions.

CK Celerie Kemble for Maitland-Smith is a licensed collection of lighting, accessories, and accents by Celerie Kemble, interior designer and author of several books on interior design.
