Masseria Salamina is an ancient 17th-century fortified residence nestled in more than sixty hectares of centuries-old olive groves, between the towns of Fasano, Monopoli and Putignano, in the heart of Puglia in southern Italy. Today the historic structure has been masterfully renovated, becoming a refined residence that serves as a luxury agritourism and farm. Here authentic hospitality is complemented by local produce and a strong commitment to energy sustainability. The spaces evoke an elite Mediterranean atmosphere: the interior courtyard, the former oil mill converted into a restaurant and the gardens create evocative outdoor settings. Potocco furnishings interpret the authentic soul of the place with contemporary elegance. The slender Keel Light chairs, designed to combine visual lightness and comfort, furnish the restaurant's lounge areas, dialoguing with the rustic and sunny Puglia context. Ola sofas, with soft, enveloping lines, offer moments of relaxation with views of the historic architecture of the place.

The Lena chairs and armchairs, with their elegant and light lines, perfectly accompany the intimate and enveloping atmosphere of the project. Seats from the Velis collection, offered in several variations including a bench, offer a mix of comfort and contemporary geometries. The Grace and Yoisho sofas define the spaces dedicated to relaxation with softness and generous proportions, while the Otab and Bon Bon tables, with their organic lines and strong material identity, complete the spaces with elegance and functionality.
